TWO STOPS, ONE MESSAGE

President Trump was met by protesters in droves calling for gun-control legislation in Dayton and El Paso on Wednesday, during visits to console the wounded and first responders following mass shootings in both cities over the weekend. 2

In Ohio, the president was met with chants of "You are why."

U.S. President Donald Trump met victims and first responders from last weekend's deadly shootings in Texas and Ohio on Wednesday, and chanting protesters accused him of inflaming tensions with anti-immigrant and racially charged rhetoric.

In El Paso, on the border with Mexico, Trump visited the University Medical Center where wounded victims were treated after a man who had posted an anti-immigrant manifesto online killed 22 people at a Walmart store on Saturday.

Hundreds of protesters, some holding signs reading "Trump is racist," "Love over hate" and "Send him back!" gathered under a broiling sun at a nearby park to condemn Trump and his presence in El Paso.

In a visit earlier in the day to Dayton, Ohio, that was mostly out of public view, Trump met shooting victims at Miami Valley Hospital where the wounded were treated after nine people and the suspect were killed in a rampage early on Sunday. It was the second of two mass shootings 13 hours apart that shocked the country.

Crowds of protesters outside the hospital and in downtown Dayton chanted "Do something!" and "You are why," and held signs reading, "Hate not welcome here" and "Stop this terror."

White House spokeswoman Stephanie Grisham said the president and first lady Melania Trump met several victims in their hospital rooms and others who had been discharged in Ohio, and thanked the medical staff for their work.

"It was a warm and wonderful visit," Trump said on Twitter. "Tremendous enthusiasm & even love."

The back-to-back massacres have reopened the national debate over gun safety.

Trump visits mass-shooting victims; protesters shout, 'Do something!'

As he left the White House, Trump said he wanted to strengthen background checks for gun purchases and make sure mentally ill people did not carry guns. He predicted congressional support for those two measures but not for banning assault rifles.

"I can tell you that there is no political appetite for that at this moment," Trump told reporters at the White House. "But I will certainly bring that up. ... There is a great appetite, and I mean a very strong appetite, for background checks."

In Dayton, Trump was greeted at the airport by a bipartisan group of state and local officials, including Democratic Dayton Mayor Nan Whaley and Democratic U.S. Sen. Sherrod Brown.

They told reporters afterward they urged Trump to call on Senate Republican leader Mitch McConnell to bring the Senate back from its summer recess to work on a House-passed bill that expands background checks on gun buyers.

Brown said he asked Trump to promise he would sign that bill. "He only said that we will get things done," Brown said, adding the president had been "comforting" to the victims.

Whaley said she agreed with Trump's decision not to visit the district where the shooting occurred given the high emotions in the community.

"A lot of people that own businesses in that district are not interested in the president being there," she told reporters. "A lot of the time his talk can be very divisive and that's the last thing we need in Dayton."

Democrats say Trump's anti-immigrant, racially charged language at rallies and on Twitter has fanned racist, white nationalist sentiments, creating a political climate more conducive to hate-based violence.

"RACIAL HARMONY"

The massacre in the predominantly Hispanic city of El Paso is being investigated as a hate crime and act of domestic terrorism, authorities said. They cited a racist manifesto posted online shortly before the shooting, which they attributed to the suspect. The FBI said the Dayton shooter had explored violent ideologies.

An open letter to Trump on Wednesday in the El Paso Times described the border city as having "a deep tradition of racial harmony" whose people came together after the tragedy. It admonished Trump for calling El Paso one of the country's most dangerous cities in his February State of the Union address.

"I can tell you that there is no political appetite for that at this moment."

President Trump, on banning assault rifles

"He's going to make war between us. Racism is starting to pop up more and more. Mexican people are fed up. He's going to create chaos around here," said Fernando Montoya, 45, who joined the protesters at the park.

On Monday, Trump gave a speech focusing on mental health reforms, tighter internet regulation and wider use of the death penalty. Democrats accused Trump of hiding behind talk of mental illness and the influence of social media rather than committing to laws to restrict gun ownership.

In Iowa, Democratic presidential front-runner Joe Biden said Trump had "fanned the flames" of white supremacy. "We have a president with a toxic tongue who has publicly and unapologetically embraced a political strategy of hate, racism, and division," Biden said.

Former Texas congressman and El Paso native Beto O'Rourke, another 2020 presidential contender, said Trump "helped create the hatred that made Saturday's tragedy possible" and thus "has no place here."

Asked on MSNBC if Trump is a white supremacist, O'Rourke said: "He is. He's also made that very clear."

Trump, in his televised White House speech on Monday, condemned "sinister ideologies" and hate. His supporters say Democrats unfairly blame him for the behavior of criminals.

U.S. Rep. Veronica Escobar, a Democrat whose congressional district includes El Paso, declared that Trump "is not welcome here."

She said on Twitter on Tuesday she declined a White House invitation to join Trump in El Paso after being told he was too busy to speak with her by phone in advance. "I refuse to be an accessory to his visit," Escobar later told CNN.

Not everyone agreed that Trump should stay away.

"This is not a political visit," El Paso Mayor Dee Margo told reporters. "He is president of the United States. So in that capacity, I will fulfill my obligations as mayor of El Paso to meet with the president and discuss whatever our needs are in this community." REUTERS

Mass panic in Times Square after motorcycles backfire witnessed that much fear before," said Ashley Grace Velazquez on Twitter.

The incident speaks to public unease after two mass shootings over the weekend.

Additionally, she thanked someone at "The Lion King" for allowing her to enter through the stage door for safety.

Although NYPD confirmed there was no shooting and that it was just some motorcycles passing through the area, people were terrified. NYPD tweeted: "There is no #ActiveShooter in #TimesSquare. Motorcycles backfiring while passing through sounded like gun shots. We are receiving multiple 911 calls. Please don't panic. The Times Square area is very safe! @NYPDnews @NYPDTimesSquare."

The false alarm came days after two mass

Panic ensued Tuesday night in Times Square as the sound of backfiring motorcycles was mistaken for the sound of gunfire.

Video footage from social media showed frightened tourists and New Yorkers alike running for safety after the loud booms rang out at about 10 p.m.

Pedestrians dropped everything and ran to seek safety wherever they could, even running into stores to protect themselves.

"Ran into @Forever21 in #timessquare to take cover of what we thought was an active shooter! Almost got trampled trying to get into the doors but that staff was great and locked us inside an made everyone go the bottom floor! Glad it wasn't a real active shooter! #timessquare" tweeted @lamlinseyb.

On Wednesday morning, another Twitter user was trying to locate a woman who had apparently dropped her purse in the chaos.

Panicked bystanders also went so far as to storm into a Broadway theater in an attempt to find safety. Gideon Glick, an actor in "To Kill a Mockingbird" at the Shubert Theatre, shared on his Twitter: "Stopped our show tonight due to a motorcycle backfire that was mistaken for a bomb or a shooting. Screaming civilians tried to storm our theater for safety. The audience started screaming and the cast fled the stage. This is the world we live in. This cannot be our world."

Another witness described the mayhem in Times Square, saying it was the first time she had witnessed a stampede. "First there was pushing, then screams, and frantic running. I don't think I've ever shootings took the lives of 31 people over the weekend, first in El Paso then hours later, in Dayton, Ohio. The weekend prior, 11 people were shot at a Brooklyn block party. Since the recent mass shootings, NYPD has increased patrols throughout the city.

Despite the increased presence of officers, NYPD said Tuesday that crime was down. Police Commissioner James P. O'Neill said, "New York City is the safest big city in America, and it's as safe as it's ever been in modern times."

How you can help NYC improve its waterfront

"Waterfront Planning Camp" invites New Yorkers to help the city improve 520 miles of waterfront.

MICHELLE COHEN
letters@metro.us

The Department of City Planning (DCP) on Wednesday invited New Yorkers of all ages to help shape the city's next Comprehensive Waterfront Plan, starting with a "Waterfront Planning Camp" event on Governors Island. In an effort to get community input and feedback on how to make the city's 520 miles of waterfront better, the DCP is hosting a free Waterfront Planning Camp on Governors Island at Nolan Park, Saturday, Aug. 17, from noon to 4 p.m.

The afternoon of interactive fun will provide a chance to share ideas for the future of the city's diverse waterfront with information and activities from the serious (go bags, preparedness and flood insurance) to the sublime (boat tours, bubbles and ice cream).

Hosted by the Trust for Governors Island and co-sponsored by eco-arts organization Works on Water, the day of brainstorming kicks off a variety of events, planning workshops and online engagement opportunities — coming soon to DCP's website — to enable people to learn and get involved in this important effort to address critical issues that include climate change, public access and jobs.

520

The Comprehensive Waterfront Plan, updated every 10 years, will be released in 2020. It aims to make New York City's 520 miles of waterfront more accessible, active and resilient.

DCP director Marisa Lago said in a statement: "New Yorkers love their waterfront and we're using it more than ever. To make this precious resource even more enjoyable, accessible and resilient, we're going to the experts — New Yorkers themselves!"

The Comprehensive Waterfront Plan, updated every 10 years, will be released in 2020. It aims to make New York City's 520 miles of waterfront more accessible, active and resilient. In addition to the multiple in-person events to come, ideas are being solicited through an online survey. A public information campaign is currently running on LinkNYC kiosks as well as on DCP's social media channels, directing visitors to nyc.gov/waterfrontplan.

Ferries (free before noon) run to Governors Island from the Battery Maritime Building in Manhattan and from Pier 6 in Brooklyn Bridge Park. For info and updates, sign up at Eventbrite (though anyone is welcome to drop by). For updates on the plan, events or to provide suggestions, you can visit DCP's web page.

Doctors Urge Knee Pain Sufferers

“Don’t Get ANY Surgery Until You See This...”

After Years Of Intense Study, NYC Medical Clinic Finally Reveals It's Best “Treatment Formula” For Helping Knee Arthritis Sufferers... Especially When So Many Other Treatments Have Failed

NEW YORK CITY - If you are even remotely interested in discovering how the latest scientific discoveries can possibly help your knee pain... then this is going to be the most exciting information you ever read.

Here is why: Knee pain can not only be brutal... it's complex. In other words, it's not a simple, easy fix.

But I'm sure you already know that. Or you wouldn't be reading this.

That's the bad news.

Now for some good news...

Over the years, NYC Pain MD has treated countless knee pain sufferers. And in that time have been able to constantly improve.

And we have come up with a treatment formula that we have found works best and helps the most patients.

This formula has reduced or even eliminated the pain in many. Some were scheduled for knee replacement surgery and felt good enough to cancel their surgery.

It's amazing when patients who were once in excruciating pain... start feeling better. And start walking again. And playing golf. Or tennis. And finally getting their lives back.

Especially when they had gone to other doctors and tried so many other things.

So many had given up hope.

Sound familiar? If it does... check this out...

The Treatment Formula

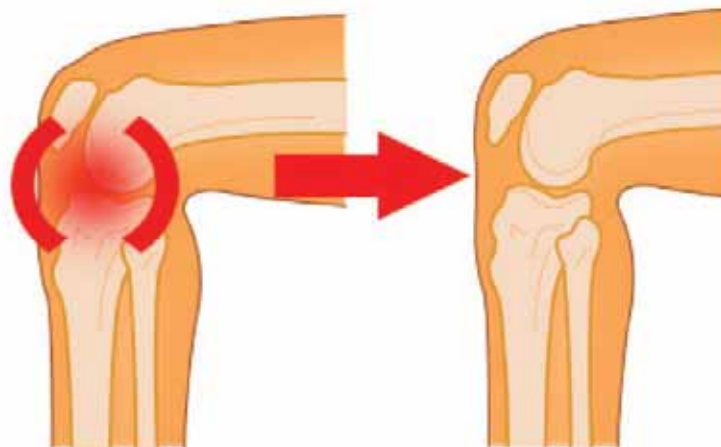

While I can't give you the entire treatment formula here (there is not enough space and WAY too complicated) I can give you the basics. And more important... I can tell you what it might be able to do for YOU.

The first and most important part of the formula is: PATIENT SELECTION.

This means, NYC Pain MD has a detailed screening process to tell who is most likely to be helped by their treatments... and who is not.

If you qualify, you have the opportunity to move forward and experience the worldclass treatments that NYC Pain MD offers.

If you do not, NYC Pain MD will tell you what they think your best options are and help you find the right doctor for you.

NYC Pain MD “Treatment Formula” A protocol of advanced medical treatments that has already helped thousands.

If you qualify, NYC Pain MD offers some of the most advanced medical treatments available today all using the most advanced imaging technology including:

- Viscosupplementation (gel injections)
- Platelet Rich Plasma (PRP)
- Stem Cell Therapy (Lipogems)
- Genicular Knee Block
- And more.

Once again, there is not enough space to go into detail about all these procedures... but here are some things you MUST KNOW...

Viscosupplementation is where a doctor introduces a gel-like medicine directly into the joint space. This helps to lubricate the joints often relieving some, most or even all of your pain. Results can last for 6 months to several years.

Many have had these treatments without good results. However, NYC Pain MD feels this is because doctors often do these “gel injections” without advanced imaging to guide them. Research shows they will often miss the joint. If the joint is missed... it is impossible for the treatment to work.

NYC Pain MD has spared no expense and used advanced imaging to guide the injections assuring the medicine gets into the joint. We frequently get results when this treatment was a failure done elsewhere.

The second thing you must know is... our treatment plans are custom made for every patient. And we have all these treatments offered in the same place. Many times you will get the best results from multiple treatments. At NYC Pain MD your doctors will all be there and will all know each other and you and your case. They work together and give you the best treatments and care without you having to go anywhere else.

The ability to select the right patients and then have the potential to give them any or all of these treatments... with all the necessary medical technology... under one roof... has allowed NYC Pain MD to get better results than they thought possible.

Here's What You Should Do Next

If you suffer with knee pain... and any of this made sense to you... NYC Pain MD would like to offer you a No-cost screening. That screening is the first step in our “Treatment Formula.”

You will get to see a doctor and ask any questions you have. Your doctor will take the first steps to see if you qualify for treatments and give you recommendations.

The best thing is... you will finally get direction. You will know what's going on and what is your best course of action... step-by-step. The treatments will be explained in detail and you will breathe a big sigh of relief finally knowing what's going on and what can or cannot be done.

There is so much we want to say to help you... but I'm out of space. Give us a call at 877-296-6310 and take the first step. That step is free without obligation.

US immigration agents arrest 680 workers at Mississippi plants

The raid is possibly the largest such action in a single state in U.S. history.

U.S. immigration authorities arrested nearly 700 people at seven agricultural processing plants across Mississippi on Wednesday in what federal officials said could be the largest worksite enforcement operation in a single state.

Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) said in a statement they detained about 680 people who were working illegally at the plants. They said they also seized business records as part of a federal criminal investigation.

Some of those detained will be released for "humanitarian reasons" and required to appear in U.S. immigration court, the U.S. Attorney's Office of the Southern District of Mississippi, which partnered with ICE, said in a statement. Others will be transported to an ICE facility in Jena, Louisiana, it said.

A video released by ICE showed buses arriving at a Canton, Mississippi, processing facility where agents searched workers and checked their identification documents. Some workers had their hands restrained with nylon ties, the video showed.

ICE did not specify the nationalities of the workers arrested. The Mexican Consulate said it was traveling to the area to assist its nationals who might have been involved.

Past large operations to enforce immigration laws at workplaces have included the arrest in 2008 of more than 300 workers at a kosher meatpacking plant in Postville, Iowa.

During the administration of former President Barack Obama, ICE prioritized the arrests of recent border crossers, people who had previously been ordered deported and those seen as a threat to public safety.

President Donald Trump has made cracking down on illegal immigration a centerpiece of his presidency, however, and ICE has stepped up its activities considerably since he took office in January 2017.

ICE said it has made more than 2,300 criminal and administrative arrests related to workplaces in the 2018 fiscal year, which ended in September, compared to just over 300 in the previous year.

Among the facilities targeted in Wednesday's operation was a Peco Foods processing plant in Canton. On its website, Peco Foods says it is the eighth-largest poultry producer in the United States.

Tom Super, spokesman for the National Chicken Council, an industry group, said meat-processing companies do their best to hire legal workers.

"The chicken industry uses every tool in the toolbox to ensure a legal workforce," Super said.

BRIEF

Canada police find two bodies believed to be teen fugitives

Canadian police said on Wednesday they found two bodies which they believe are of the fugitive teenage boys charged with killing a university lecturer and suspected in the murders of two tourists in British Columbia.

Kam McLeod, 19, and Bryer Schmegelesky, 18, both from Port Alberni, British Columbia, had been on the run for nearly three weeks with confirmed sightings since July 22 and sparked an intense Canadian manhunt.

Police declined to say how the two had died, saying that they would wait for the autopsy to confirm their identities and cause of death.

The pair was charged with second-degree murder of Leonard Dyck, 64, a botany lecturer at the University of British Columbia in Vancouver, Canada. They are also suspects in the murders of Chynna Deese, 24, of Charlotte, North Carolina, and Lucas Fowler, 23, from Sydney, Australia.

The bodies were found about a half-mile from where the Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP) said "significant evidence" was discovered on Friday, and about 5 miles from where McLeod and Schmegelesky's burning car was found on July 22, police said.

The significant evidence, which the RCMP continues to decline to describe, proved to be "critical" in finding the bodies, Jane MacLachy, assistant commissioner with the RCMP in Manitoba, told a news conference in Winnipeg.

"The manhunt in Manitoba is over," Ralph Goodale, federal minister of public safety, tweeted on Wednesday.

The difficulty of the terrain was cited as a reason for the delay in finding the bodies.

The forest was so thick that linking arms and traversing ground, as is normally done in search operations, was out of the question, MacLachy said. REUTERS

Vazquez sworn in as Puerto Rico's governor after court ousts Pierluisi

Puerto Rico got its third governor in less than a week on Wednesday just hours after the bankrupt U.S. territory's supreme court ruled that Pedro Pierluisi's assumption of the office was unconstitutional and ordered him to leave.

The island's justice secretary, Wanda Vazquez, was sworn in as governor at the supreme court in San Juan.

A unanimous decision by the nine-member high court nullified Pierluisi's governorship based on the fact his earlier appointment as secretary of state and next in line for governor had not been confirmed by both chambers of the legislature.

Pierluisi, who was given until 5 p.m. local time by the court to vacate the office, said he "must step aside and support" Vazquez.

"This is a time when we must all unite for Puerto Rico, leaving behind any partisan, ideological or personal agendas," he said in a statement.

Vazquez last week initially expressed an unwillingness to take over the island's top government post after being targeted by protesters for being too close to disgraced Governor Ricardo Rossello, who left office last Friday.

In a statement following the court ruling, Vazquez said: "Puerto Rico needs certainty and stability."

The high court's ruling followed weeks of political turmoil with Rossello resigning after days of protests demanding he step down.

Offensive chat messages between Rossello and his closest allies and federal corruption charges against two former members of his administration sparked the protests, which drew around a third of the island's 3.2 million people to the streets. REUTERS

Our guide to the Dominican Day Parade

The 37th annual parade is set to take place this Sunday.

LENYON WHITAKER
lenyon.whitaker@metro.us

The 2019 Dominican Day Parade is coming to Manhattan this weekend.

The annual parade kicks off at noon Sunday, stepping off at 35th Street and traveling north along Sixth Avenue to 56th Street. The event brings together thousands of people to honor and celebrate Dominican heritage and culture.

Now in its 37th year, the Dominican Day Parade continues to spread awareness and understanding of the diverse Dominican community in New York City and around the world.

The Dominican Day Parade started in 1982 with smaller celebrations and events to celebrate heritage and culture in Washington Heights but has grown to become an annual parade that takes place in Manhattan on 6th Avenue.

The annual Dominican Day Parade features more than 10,000 participants and is considered a "joyful celebration of all things Dominican," according to the official parade organization.

Television personality, actress and singer Charytin Goyco was named the Madrina (godmother) of this year's Dominican Day Parade.

If you're attending the 2019 Dominican Day Parade, here's what you need to know before you go, including route and street closures in the area that could affect your Manhattan commute.

Dominican Day Parade 2019 street closures

According to the New York City Department of Transportation, the following streets will be closed on Sunday, Aug. 11, from noon to 4 p.m. for the 37th annual Dominican Day Parade.

Formation:

- 36th Street between Broadway and 5th Avenue

- 37th Street between Broadway and 5th Avenue

- 38th Street between Broadway and 5th Avenue

Dominican Day Parade 2019 on TV, livestream

If you want to watch the Dominican Day Parade online, Univision has you covered. The network will broadcast the 37th annual Dominican Day Parade across all three of its local platforms. From 2 p.m. to 3 p.m. you can catch live coverage of the parade on WFUT UniMás New York, on radio at Que Buena 92.7 FM, and online at UnivisionNewYork.com.

Route:

- 6th Avenue between 36th Street and 52nd Street

Dispersal:

- 52nd Street between 5th Avenue and 7th Avenue

FedEx ends ground delivery partnership with Amazon

FedEx Corp. confirmed on Wednesday it would terminate its contract with Amazon.com Inc. for small-package ground deliveries, as the online retailer focuses on building out its own delivery network.

The move by the U.S. package delivery company comes two months after it decided not to renew its contract with Amazon for U.S. cargo delivery through its plane-based express service.

"This change is consistent with our strategy to focus on the broader e-commerce market," FedEx said in a statement as it looks to expand and serve companies that would include rivals of Amazon.

Amazon in a statement said it is "constantly innovating to improve the carrier experience and sometimes that means reevaluating our carrier relationships."

REUTERS

Amazon has been expanding its own delivery network of planes, trucks and vans and is regarded as a potential long-term threat to FedEx and rival United Parcel Service Inc. (UPS), both of which have long counted the e-commerce company as a customer.

"What was a frenemy, they've now figured out is their competitor," said Trip Miller, managing partner at Memphis-based Gullane Capital, referring to the FedEx relationship with Amazon.

Analysts have said Amazon has secured a better rate with UPS for package deliveries on planes, so it makes little sense for the company to partner with FedEx.

Amazon accounted for less than 1.3 percent of FedEx's revenue last year. UPS, which derives a relatively larger share of revenue from the online retailer, is widely expected to benefit from higher volumes following the latest move, according to analysts.

FedEx already warned in June that U.S.-China trade tensions and the termination of its contract with Amazon would hurt its fiscal 2020 performance.

Meanwhile, FedEx Ground is working to wring out more residential profit by shifting the delivery of nearly 2 million SmartPost packages from U.S. Postal Service mail carriers to its own drivers. REUTERS

Actor Chris Lowell on season 3 of 'Glow' and being on set with Geena Davis

The hit show returns to Netflix this Friday.
PAT KING

This weekend, the hit Netflix series "Glow" will be returning for its third season as it follows the Gorgeous Ladies of Wrestling as they take their show to Vegas. Finding a residency in a theater amongst the glitz and glamour of "Sin City" shows the ladies a new perspective on what it takes to succeed in show business amongst the town's crowded field of entertainment. What sacrifices will they have to make in order to elevate the show to the potential that they know it has?

"What I found so moving about the third season is that it's a real empathetic showcase of the life of a performer," says actor Chris Lowell, who plays Bash Howard, the onetime financier of the production and the show's announcer. "Not just a wrestler, but any actor. I think a big part of it is, like if you are doing a play or something, there is so much excitement and buzz and stress and manic energy leading up to opening night.

And then, once the show is set and you are doing it night after night and show after show, it really starts to take a different kind of muscle to maintain. It really starts to become about, how are you maintaining your physical and mental health? How are you trying to keep it fresh? How do balance such an insane work schedule with family or friendships? That's something that anyone who has done this, ever, can relate to."

As the third season unfolds, many of the show's stars come face-to-face with an uglier side of show business that was only hinted at during their brief time on the air. Now that they have arrived as performers in one of the business's most notorious hubs, what compromises will they need to make in order to be successful?

"When you're an actor, when you first start out, all you care about is acting. Then it's a real scary moment in your life when you've achieved what you thought you wanted and realize that it's not everything that you thought it was going to be," explains Lowell. "In fact, you want more. Some of those things that you want are in conflict with the choices you've made as an artist. How do you get that balance? I think all of those things are universally felt and powerful and it's a really great thing to watch these characters go through that this season."

For Lowell's character Bash, finding success in Vegas means that he has to hide any evidence of his homosexuality, and when we meet him in season 3, he is throwing himself fully into the marriage he stumbled into with wrestler Britanica. Lowell was amazed to find out about the conservative nature of such a notoriously over-the-top and openly promiscuous town during the '80s, when the show takes place.

"The level of homophobia that existed in Vegas in the '80s is not what I would have expected," says Lowell upon reading the scripts from showrunners Liz Flahive and Carly Mensch. "The reality is, when Liberace has to stay in the closet, you know you're in a homophobic town."

Bash is certainly at a crossroads in his life where he needs to either come to terms with himself or keep his secrets hidden in order to navigate the waters of success. Lowell assures that those answers won't be found easily.

"Bash is still on his psychosexual odyssey and I think that he definitely makes progress in that search for himself," he says. "But it doesn't necessarily mean by the end of the season that he knows all of the answers. I still think he has miles to go before he sleeps."

The show features one of the strongest casts on television right now, with stellar performances from Allison

Brie as Ruth, Betty Gilpin as Debbie and Marc Maron as the wrestling show's director, Sam Silvia. The third season also will welcome Oscar-winning actor — and overall legendary person — Geena Davis to its cast as Sandy Devereaux St. Clair, a onetime Vegas showgirl who is now the entertainment director of the Flamingo Las Vegas and Casino where the show is in residence. So, what did Lowell think of being on set with such a legend of the screen?

"Geena and I had a lot of fun together," Lowell says. "I think everybody was so nervous when she came on set and was trying to be either calm and collected or give her her space. I just immediately started asking questions about 'A League of Their Own' and that she's an Olympic archer, a part of MENSAs, and what it was like filming 'Thelma and Louise.' I had no shame in my fanboy crush on her and the work that she's done. I think Geena had a lot of patience with me, which I could not be happier about. It was great to be in the presence of the legend that she is."

Billy Crudup on the emotional standoff of 'After the Wedding'

The remake of the Danish film, co-starring Julianne Moore and Michelle Williams, hits theaters this weekend. PAT KING

The streets of Midtown Manhattan are being treated to a vulgar display of rain outside the hotel where I meet actor Billy Crudup to talk about his new film, "After the Wedding." In a way, it's perfect weather to have as a backdrop to talk about such a heavy and emotional film that delivers high-water-mark performances not only from Crudup, but his co-stars Julianne Moore and Michelle Williams.

Adapted from the original Danish film by Bart Freundlich, "After the Wedding" centers around an American woman named Isabel, played by Michelle Williams, who is currently working in an orphanage in India. The organization is running low on funding and they must come up with ideas for how to find investors quickly. Out of the blue, she is contacted by a wealthy CEO named Theresa who is offering to give the orphanage a generous donation. To receive the money, Isabel must travel to New York to meet with Theresa. While hashing out the details, Theresa invites Isabel to stay the weekend and attend her daughter Abby's wedding. Once Isabel arrives, she immediately recognizes Theresa's husband (and Abby's father) as her ex, Oscar, played by Crudup. As information unfolds, Isabel learns that Abby is actually the child Oscar and she conceived years ago and had, supposedly, given up for adoption. From there, more secrets are revealed as to both the reasons why Oscar made his decision to keep Abby and Theresa's motivations behind helping Isabel.

At the moment when Isabel and Oscar finally reunite, you truly feel the pit in your stomach, secondhand, from the estranged couple. It is almost like an emotional standoff where the audience is to decide which character's motivations are the most justified given the circumstances of their situation. That kind of moral predicament is what drew Crudup to the film in the first place.

"When we were thinking about doing this movie, I was saying that I wanted to play Oscar when he has to manage that situation," says Crudup. "When he's seen Isabel leave, when they've made the pact to give their daughter up for adoption, and when he's pacing in his room, knowing that she's six blocks away and he can't help himself but walk to the adoption agency and that he can't help but go back. That he's riddled with guilt now that he has this unforeseen attachment to this young human being that he had no idea would erupt in him in a way that it had and now has no way of contacting Isabel. And that struggle is fascinating and one that creatively is new to me. I haven't seen that portrayed before. So to imagine Oscar having gone through that and then ultimately coming out of it thinking that he has done the absolute right thing, only to discover later on, after having 20 years of fortification in that belief, to see it completely shattered. That's a great dramatic arc and I think a confusing one, too, for audiences."

Audiences will surely choose who their villains and heroes are while watching this film. But, what the story does so wonderfully is pose the question: What would you do if the shoe was on the other foot?

"I feel that so often in life there are not simple answers to human behavior," explains Crudup. "I mean, particularly at a time when we're super-busy identifying our differences, the commonality we have far exceeds that. It's just much more confusing to tolerate all of it. We try to live in a civil society, but the actual interpersonal communication, expression of beliefs, and expression of values and feelings are dictated by social discourse. And in order to have a reasonable one, you

"I feel that so often in life there are not simple answers to human behavior."

have to have a humane approach to people, which is that we may not agree on things, but we all belong and we all have to try to get along. And that's, to me, a generous way of approaching a civil-social-society. And so I think this film tries to address that emotionally."

GETTY

One of the interesting aspects of this remake of the original Susanne Bier film is that Freundlich chose to swap the genders of all of the characters in order to both show Theresa and Isabel as strong, successful and emotionally complex women, but also to show a new definition of masculinity given that Oscar is mostly dependent on the life Theresa is able to provide for him and his daughter.

Crudup believes this reversal was an important narrative device in order to give Moore and Williams the opportunity to take on such powerful roles, but it also gave him the chance to sink his teeth into the vulnerability of his character.

"That's an atypical patriarch role, right?" Crudup says. "It does something great for male actors, as well, to be sure to give them the opportunity to find the features of masculinity that happened in that kind of power strip, a structural change. It's a phenomenal thing."

Joe Gatto of 'Impractical Jokers' on the joy of 'punishing' your friends

The hit truTV
hidden-camera show just got picked up for season 9 PAT KING

It was recently announced that the hit hidden-camera comedy, "Impractical Jokers", will be returning for its ninth season next year. The show is rated the number one comedy on cable and was responsible for ushering the great roster of comedies on truTV. I caught up with one of the group's founding members, Joe Gatto, to talk about getting picked up for a new season ahead of tonight's season eight midseason return at 10 p.m.

"Impractical Jokers" just got renewed for its ninth season. Did you ever think the show would make it to nine seasons, let alone the No. 1 comedy on cable?
No! I mean, I was happy to get episode two! Season eight, we're going to hit our 200th episode, which is just insane to me. And then to get greenlit to go for another season is just beyond any wild expectations, you know? Right, right. That's like, no, in between seasons, you know, um, you know, as you've gone along, you know, I guess like, um, what's the preparation like between seasons? Like, um, do you guys kind of like sit in there? You know, there's this, there's only so much you can divulge between you and the rest of the group because you're, you're trying to make everyone feel uncomfortable.

What is preparation for each new season like?

Well, there's a lot of different ways that things come up with the show. We spend so much time together, like with our touring and you know, I'm with these guys every basically almost every day in my life. I show them more than my family. You know, there was one point actually that we show each other for 52 days straight. Wow. Nobody should see each other that much. So we, uh, you know, we, we either, you know, we'll be around and doing something and, you know, we live our lives together. We'll go shopping together and we'll go to the movies and we'll hang out cause we're friends and while we're out and about we'll be like, "that'd be weird if we did that on the show." We'll think of stuff on the fly then just by being out in public. At the beginning of every season, we take six weeks with writers and we just sit in a room and we brainstorm new ways for challenges to push the envelope and new ways to make comedy, you know? New goals, new challenges, new way to use actors and, and, and things. So the show has really evolved into a hidden-camera comedy show throughout the years.

What gives you more satisfaction, when a prank goes down perfectly or when you are pleasantly surprised by something going completely different than you expected it to?

Well, you know, there are two different types of satisfactions. Cause like when you're getting punished, you don't know what's happening. If it's good you're miserable because it's happening. But then you're like proud of your friend cause they got you d it's a good one. You're like, "oh that was good." It's bittersweet that way. Some of ours are long burns and take a lot of planning. So when those go off without a hitch, it's like, "oh, all right we did that well". So it's like a pride when you're on the other side of it.

Hotel Monaco debuts new pop-up hotel suite

"Love Is Suite" is perfect for a couple's staycation.
MADELINE PRESLAND

There's a hotel room that meets all your Instagram-worthy travel goals right here in Philly.

If you want to escape the real world without going too far, finding the perfect staycation hotel is a must. Treating yourself and your partner to a night away is the perfect way to make date night even more memorable, and why not make it an opportunity to explore your own city? Hotel Monaco (433 Chestnut St.) is a chic boutique hotel in Old City that has all of the essentials for a staycation: in-room spa treatments, curated bath toiletries from Philly's own Duross & Langel and a beautiful rooftop bar. The luxurious rooms are styled to feel modern yet cozy, with patterned wallpaper, comfy couches and bold furniture. But there's more than great amenities and photogenic decor. The hotel wants travelers to focus on love and communication, and take this to the next level with their pop-up "Love Is Suite" room.

"Love Is Suite" incorporates a few interactive elements. Travelers can take Polaroid photos of themselves and add them to a guest book with notes. A "wishing tree" gives travelers the opportunity to leave pins on a map of the world and leave advice on travel, relationships or anything else. For shaking things up while staying in the room, try mixing aphrodisiac cocktails made with aperitifs and tequila.

Travelers can book this corner room through Aug. 31 for a romantic experience to make each moment special. Though social media can fuel your wanderlust, it's also important to take a step back and focus on making real connections while traveling.

Kimpton, the hotel company that owns Hotel Monaco, makes this part of their mission through the Kimpton Stay Human Project. This initiative is changing the way the hotel describes its experiences, and aims to help all travelers make connections, even while traveling alone.

Sights to see
Hotel Monaco is close to a range of excellent restaurants and things to do. Some rooms face Independence Hall at 5th and Chestnut, and the Museum of the American Revolution (101 S. 3rd St.) is a short stroll down the block. For dinner, make reservations at Zahav (237 St. James Pl.). The Israeli restaurant was named the best restaurant in America by the James Beard foundation earlier this year. Make sure you treat yourself to a Parisian-style brunch at Royal Boucherie (52 S. 2nd St.), including a few of their craft cocktails.

Position battles to watch as Giants, Jets kick off preseason

DEFENSIVE TACKLE STEVE MCLENDON VS. QUINNEN WILLIAMS

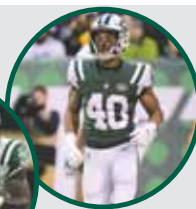

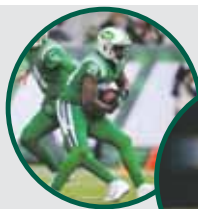

While the Jets listed McLendon ahead of Williams on the depth chart, there might not be much validity to that.

The 33-year-old McLendon has appeared in every game over the past two years, recording 51 combined tackles, 11 tackles for a loss, and 1.5 sacks.

However, Williams' is expected to revolutionize the position along the Jets' defensive line as the No. 3 overall pick is considered by many to be the top-overall talent to come out of the 2019 NFL Draft.

It seems like McLendon is just a placeholder until Williams proves this preseason that he is ready to take over.

ALL IMAGES GETTY IMAGES

RUNNING BACK BILAL POWELL VS. ELI MCGUIRE VS. TRENTON CANNON

The Jets top-two running backs are already set with Le'Veon Bell and Ty Montgomery poised to create an imposing duo. However, the Jets continue to suggest that they are going to roll with a very deep backfield in 2019.

That's why they retained Powell, who is entering his ninth season with the organization. He's averaged 430 yards per season during his tenure and the Jets know exactly what they'll get from him.

Cannon and McGuire got their fair share of reps last season and should be in the mix for the final spot in the backfield.

WIDE RECEIVER #4 SPOT ON THE ROSTER IS STILL UP FOR GRABS

As the running back spot, the Jets' top-three wide receivers are basically etched in stone. No one will be dethroning Robby Anderson, Quincy Enunwa, and Jamison Crowder.

However, the No. 4 spot is an absolute free-for-all as eight pass catchers could be in the mix for the last spot.

None of their career numbers necessarily jump off the page:

TIM WHITE

3 games, 1 reception, 14 yards, 9 punt returns, 6 kick returns, 0 TD

DEONTE THOMPSON

1,193 yards, 4 TD

JETS vs. GIANTS PRESEASON OPENER TONIGHT, 7 PM, NBC, NFL NETWORK

CENTER JON HALAPIO VS. SPENCER PULLEY

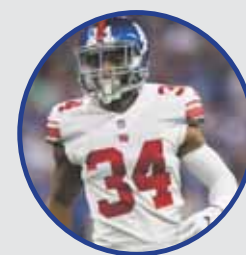

Jon Halapio seems to be the favorite for the starting job after his 2018 campaign was derailed because of an ankle and foot injury.

Spencer Pulley replaced him and performed admirably along a redeveloping offensive line.

The Giants continue to build a prominent protection unit for Eli Manning and later, Daniel Jones, adding Kevin Zeitler and Mike Remmers during the offseason.

The starting edge will likely go to the center who can not only block effectively, but can also build a solid relationship with both Manning and Jones.

NICKEL CORNERBACK GRANT HALEY VS. COREY BALLENTINE

All indications have pointed to Grant Haley taking over as the Giants' nickel corner. He's taken an overwhelming majority of first-team snaps since the spring.

Haley started nine of his 10 appearances last season, recording 33 total tackles with two passes defended.

Ballentine was a sixth-round pick of the Giants earlier this year and was considered an afterthought, especially when he was injured in a shooting that killed his former college teammate shortly after the draft.

However, he's been coming along during late-July practices and is showing promise.

QUARTERBACK ELI MANNING VS. DANIEL JONES

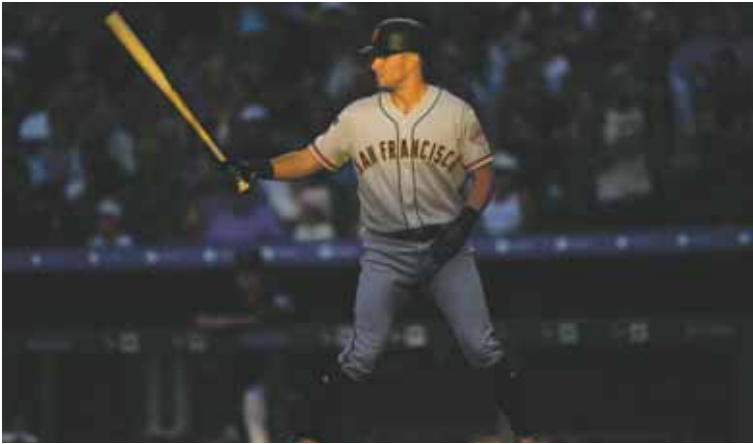

At the moment, nothing really indicates that Eli Manning won't be the Giants' starting quarterback when the regular season kicks off. But that doesn't mean that his job is completely safe.

If rookie Daniel Jones comes out and lights up the preseason, he might force head coach Pat Shurmur's hand and introduce the Duke product earlier than expected.

Shurmur and GM Dave Gettleman continue to rave about the young quarterback and his budding abilities.

At this point, it's not a question of if Jones will see starting time this season, but when.

Veteran second baseman Joe Panik was designated for assignment by the Giants. GETTY IMAGES

With Cano out, Panik among 2B options for Mets

The Mets could be searching for an infielder to bolster their depth chart.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

With Robinson Cano out indefinitely due to a torn hamstring, the New York Mets have some roster scrambling to do because all of a sudden, these games matter.

The Mets remain the hottest team in baseball through the first week of August as they've won 12 of their last 13 to move two games over .500.

That's the first time they've reached that mark since April.

Losing Cano, however, provides a sizable blow. Even though he had struggled for most of his debut season with the Mets, he had been hot as of late.

Over his last 30 games, he was slashing .307/.339/.518 with six home runs and 15 RBI.

Manager Mickey Callaway's temporary fix for Cano's absence has been less than convincing.

If the Mets had more reliable outfield depth, the quick fix would have been to slot Jeff McNeil back to his natural position. Instead, he's had to play right field alongside fellow out-of-positioners with Michael Conforto in center and JD Davis in left.

Luis Guillorme and Adeiny Hechavarria have been called upon to bolster the middle infield, which hasn't provided the Mets with much all season. Hechavarria is batting .210 in 59 games while Guillorme has collected just five hits in his first 30 at-bats (.167).

The Mets do have a triad of options within the organization that could offer more of a boost to the lineup because slotting Guillorme and Hechavarria in at the bottom of the lineup — which Callaway did on Tuesday night — won't provide any threat.

Currently plying their trade at triple-A Syracuse, Dilson Herrera, Ruben Tejada, and Arismendy Alcantara seem like prime candidates for a promotion to the majors.

Herrera, a 25-year-old second baseman has struggled during brief stints in the majors with the Mets and Cincinnati Reds, but he's .247/.328/.531 with 22 home runs in the minors.

Tejada is a fan favorite amongst Mets supporters. While he only batted .255 with the club over six seasons, he'll forever be remembered for getting his leg broken by Chase Utley during the 2015 NLDS. He's ripping it up in Syracuse, batting .343 with six home runs and 36 RBI in 67 games.

Alcantara, 27, is also a second baseman who is batting .295 in triple-A.

Both Herrera and Alcantara have had limited success at the MLB levels. The former has a .203 career batting average while the latter has an anemic mark of .189.

If management is not feeling confident about any of those bats, they could pursue former San Francisco Giants second baseman, Joe Panik.

The 28-year-old was designated for assignment on Tuesday shortly after the Giants traded for Scooter Gennett. The Yonkers, NY native and St. John's alumnus was batting .235 with three home runs in 103 games this season.

Despite the struggles, the Mets will "talk about" bringing Panik on if he's made available, per Newsday's Anthony Rieber.

Panik can be claimed off waivers by any other MLB team within seven days of his DFA but that team would have to pay the remainder of his $3.85 million deal. If he is not claimed, he has the choice to be sent to San Francisco's triple-A squad or become a free agent.

The Mets' interest is understandable despite Panik's down year.

He's a career .271 hitter and was the Giants' starting second baseman during their run to the 2014 World Series title. He has a .267 career post-season batting average in 21 games.
